Schatt; song, "God Bless America," school; pantomime, primary department, with Miss Helen Harkness as soloist; song, primary department; address, the Rev. Harkness.

SEVERAL INJURED IN A QUINTET OF ACCIDENTS

Car Being Towed By Truck Veers From Highway And Strikes 'Cyclist

OFFICERS KEPT BUSY

A quintet of accidents in Lower Bucks County Saturday took toll in injuries and damage to vehicles. All five cases were handled by Pennsylvania Motor Police of Oxford Valley.

One of the most peculiar of the accidents was that on State Road, between Bristol and Croydon, when a passenger car, being towed by a truck, veered off the roadway and struck a boy riding a bicycle on the road shoulder. The injured lad, Stanley Wojner, Philadelphia, was thrown against the wheel of a chum, but the latter was unhurt. Wojner suffered abrasions of the upper lip, leg and left hand. The truck was operated by Samuel Rosenthal, Trenton, N. J., while the passenger car was being guided by Ernest Perry, Trenton. Rosenthal was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

A Philadelphian, John Faxton, riding on the floor of a truck, with his feet resting on the running board, was hurled from the vehicle, the rear wheel of the vehicle passing over his foot. Treated at Parkland first aid station, he was later taken to the Jewish Hospital, Philadelphia. The accident occurred on the Lincoln Highway near Janney. The truck was being operated by Fred J. Shattuch, Philadelphia.

Newtown Councilman Dies Very Suddenly

NEWTOWN, June 10—One of Newtown borough's councilmen, Charles Hauler, chairman of the ordinance committee of that body, died suddenly yesterday afternoon of an attack of apoplexy suffered a few hours earlier, when he stopped to talk with neighbors as he was enroute home from church.

Mr. Hauler, aged 58, the husband of Anna Conard Hauler, was employed as a watchman by the Newtown Tile Works. Following the sudden attack he was in an unconscious condition until the time of his death.

In addition to his wife he leaves a son Frank, of Hatboro; a grandson, John Charles Hauler; and two brothers, Henry, of Line Lexington; and George of Mt. Airy.

The funeral service will be conducted by the Rev. Charles Boraston, pastor of Newtown Methodist Church, at the late home of the deceased, 43 Sterling street, Thursday at 2.30 p. m. Interment will be in Newtown Cemetery, with R. L. Horner, funeral director, in charge. Friends may call Wednesday evening. Members of Siloam Lodge, 265, I. O. O. F., with which Mr. Hauler was affiliated, will also conduct a service.

DIES OF FRACTURED SKULL

TREVOSE, June 10—Death on Saturday claimed William Shermer, 41, husband of Ethel Jones Shermer, in Abington Hospital. Mr. Shermer's death was the result of a fractured skull, believed due to a fall. He was found injured and in an unconscious state a few days before his death, and was immediately removed to the hospital. His wife, five children and one grandchild survive. The deceased was employed by an ice company. Burial will take place tomorrow in Evergreen Memorial Park. Service will be held at the R. L. Horner funeral home, Langhorne, at two p. m. Friends may call this evening.

JOSEPH HUBER

TREVOSE, June 10—Burial was made today in Sunset Memorial Park of Joseph Huber, 59, husband of Margaret Kammink Huber, who died on Thursday. A carpenter by trade, he had been ill for some time. The Rev. John A. McElroy officiated, with R. L. Horner, funeral director, in charge of arrangements.

ITALY DECLARES WAR

ROME, June 10—Italy has declared war on Great Britain and France, Premier Benito Mussolini announced today.

The electrifying announcement that Italy has thrown her "8,000,000 bayonets" against the armies of England and France was made by Il Duce from the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia, while thousands gathered in the square below cheered him to the echo.

Hundreds of Black Shirts and civilians flocked before the Palazzo Venzia to hear Il Duce in his first public pronouncement since his speech at Cuneo, last Fall, when he announced he was wrapping himself in a cloak of silence. All newspapers throughout Italy were ordered to stand by to issue extra editions.

Mussolini's appearance on the balcony of his palace was officially described as an "adante"—which is a public assembly to hear a historic pronunciation.

It was understood that Mussolini's speech would be broadcast throughout the world in Italian, German, Spanish, English, French and probably Arabic, and other languages.

Earlier, responsible quarters stated that an eleventh hour move in Paris, to prevent Italy's entry into the war by granting Mussolini territorial concessions had failed.

Fresh British Troops Landed In France

London, June 10—Dispatch of a new British Expeditionary Force to France was announced in London today, coincident with assertions that the German army is finally weakening in its drive on Paris.

"French leaders remain master of the maneuvers," an official military spokesman said, "while the faltering of German troops and deterioration of materials is beginning to weigh heavily on the German general staff." Arrival of the fresh British troops in France was disclosed by Prime Minister Churchill.

In a message to French Prime Minister Reynaud, Churchill stated:

"Within the last few days, fresh British forces have landed in France to take their place with those already engaged in the gigantic struggle, while further re-enforcements shortly will be available.

"All available means are being asserted to give help by and, sea and air. The R. A. F. has been engaged continuously over the battle fields and within them."

BACCALAUREATE SERMON DELIVERED TO CLASS OF 1940, LANGHORNE-MIDDLETOWN HIGH SCHOOL, AT NESHAMINY METHODIST CHURCH, HULMEVILLE

HULMEVILLE, June 10—Basing his message on the "wings of the morning" as read from the 139th Psalm, the Rev. Wilmer E. Harkness, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to members of the class of 1940, Langhorne-Middletown high school, last evening, in Neshaminy Methodist Church.

To the young folks, about to receive their diplomas, the minister told the prophecy of "winged planes," 350 years before the Wright brothers invented their flying machine. After recalling history-making flights such as that of Lindbergh, the clergyman stressed the need of those to blaze the trail of spiritual sky-ways. "We need such who travel the highways of the spirit, to look down and give us a better perspective of the 'landscape' far below."

That aircraft can be a curse as well as a blessing, is shown in the world of war-turmoil today, was another point brought out. "But the wings of the spirit are the forces which can change these things into channels that will lift civilization to a higher plane of peace, happiness, service and better living." The manner in which the prophets of old can supply "wings of the spirit" to uplift the world, through guidance to a wholesome Christian life, was a challenge given the young folks.

Two "wings" pointed out by the Rev. Harkness, which the graduates might well choose for their "flight" into the life which stretches ahead, are faith and fidelity. Christ's faith in man was used as an example of faith. "He sees a saint in a poor broken humanity." Then turning thoughts to fidelity the speaker said "We can't do much without faith; but having faith we must be faith-ful. There is no surer sign of intrinsic worthlessness than in a careless, indifferent disloyalty. 'I would be true for there are those who trust me; I would be pure, for there are those who care'," he quoted from a well-known hymn. "How dare we loosely disregard this challenge?"

Another challenge given was a "flight" into the uncharted realm of the spirit, there being great need for leaders and workers in the spiritual life.

"Let us use our wings of the spirit to help mediate that world to the burdened world about us."

Miss Clara L. Illick, pianist, was the pianist for the processional; and also accompanied the two special selections of the choir.

Cut The Communists Out

Washington, June 8.

ONE domestic effect of the emergency created by the Nazi victories, which should hearten a good many people, is the alteration in the Administration attitude toward Communist-controlled and Communist-saturated organizations which formerly stood high in White House favor and numbered among their supporters important Roosevelt aides.

IT would be beneficial if this altered attitude could be carried still further and all such organizations sternly discontinued in an emphatic and decisive way. However, it is encouraging to record that the Administration coddling of Communistically inclined persons apparently has come to an end. The soggy sentimentalism which insisted upon regarding these calculating Communist leaders as "splendid young liberals" is to be abandoned—at least to some extent.

EVIDENCE of this was given a few days ago when two highly placed Administration officials announced their resignation as members of the National Lawyers' Guild, letting it be understood they did so because of its pro-Communist color. Other members connected with the Administration, it is believed, are to follow this example. In brief, the Administration is "running out" on the Guild. As it was conceived, organized and promoted with full Presidential approval and as it has been the especial pet of all the young Administration lawyers, this seems a significant reversal of policy.

Joseph A. Lombardo Weds Miss Mary Esposito

Attended by a bridesmaid and four usherettes, Miss Mary Ida Esposito, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donato Esposito, Wood and Penn streets, became the bride yesterday afternoon of Joseph A. Lombardo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lambardo, 913 Mansion street.

Given in marriage by her father, the former Miss Esposito was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Esposito, as bridesmaid; Mrs. Phillip Quici, Roebling, N. J.; Mrs. Nicholas DiBlassio, Miss Mary Lanza and Miss Mary Napoli, Bristol, as usherettes. Serving as groomsman was Frank Sabatini, Wilson avenue; with the ushers included Frank Vanucci, Mansion street, and James Ferrazzano, Trenton, N. J.

The ceremony took place in St. Ann's Church at three p. m., with the Rev. Father Peter Pinci officiating. Miss Frances Tamburella was organist; and the vocalist, Miss Yolanda deFelice sang "Ave Maria" and "The Rosary."

White net over satin was chosen for the colonial style wedding gown of the bride. The hoop-skirt model had long sleeves, and form-fitting bodice. On either side of the Sweetheart neckline were orange blossoms. The long net veil was attached to a white flower headdress; and slippers were of white satin. The bride carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, with a shower of lilies-of-the-valley.

The five attendants were attired in gowns of rose net over taffeta. These were fashioned like the gown of the bride, with the exception that sleeves were of short puffed style. The costumes were enhanced by wide-brimmed straw hats in natural tone, with velvet streamers of American beauty tone, the streamers reaching the hem-line. Linen slippers of the American beauty shade were worn; and each carried a colonial bouquet of red roses.

Five hundred guests were entertained at the evening reception in Mutual Aid hall. For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, N. Y., and parts of Canada, Mrs. Lombardo wore a green silk dress, black straw picture hat, black accessories and a corsage of mixed flowers. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Lombardo will take up residence at 913 Mansion street.

The bride's gift to her attendants were heart-shaped gold lockets and chains; and to each of his attendants Mr. Lombardo presented initialed gold tie and collar pin, and pocket chain.

SLATE FROM PENN'S BARN IN ENGLAND GIVEN COMMISSION

OVER 200 WERE PRESENT

Relic Will Be Preserved At Pennsbury Among Others To Form Exhibit

A slate from William Penn's barn at Worminghurst, Sussex, England, principal home of the Proprietor in the old world, sent to the restored "home of his dreams," "Pennsbury Manor," was officially presented to the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, Saturday afternoon. The occasion of the presentation of this gift from present occupants of Penn's home at Worminghurst was a luncheon-meeting of the Welcome Society, which took place on the lawn overlooking the Delaware River at the recreated "Pennsbury."

Henry Paul Busch, Philadelphia, president of the Welcome Society, introduced to the gathering of more than 200 on this occasion, Dr. Charles Francis Jenkins, who presented the large slate to the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, it being accepted in well-chosen words by Prof. Roy F. Nichols, a member of the commission.

Attached to the gift, which will in time be housed at "Pennsbury," was a card bearing the following inscription: "Slate from William Penn's Barn at Worminghurst, Sussex, England, his home, 1677-1697. Presented by Mrs. William Hansbury Aggs, of Worminghurst, Little Thakeham, Sussex."

It was approximately three years ago that Mrs. Aggs visited "Pennsbury" in the company of Dr. Jenkins, that being prior to commencement of the work of restoration. Being much interested in the plans, she expressed a desire to have some part in the activities. Securing from the barn at Worminghurst one of the original slates she had it shipped with great care to this country.

In his speech of acceptance, Prof. Nichols told of what the future holds for "Pennsbury." Funds provided by the Commonwealth for purchase of additional land on either side of the site, in order that the property might be properly developed, were told of. "The State of Pennsylvania plans to restore in some semblance the grounds, walks, paths, gardens, etc," Prof. Nichols informed. Commenting upon the securing of furnishings for the manor house to correspond with the period of Penn's time, the speaker mentioned that there are very few Queen Ann pieces on this side of the Atlantic, and he solicited aid of members in this particular phase of endeavor.

Mr. Busch, the Welcome Society president, recalled the months of anxious waiting upon the part of the members to visit the restored "Pennsbury Manor." A brief resume of the details involved in research prior to, and the erection of the structures, was given, Mr. Busch informing that the buildings followed original measurements. "The Welcome Society had an active part in the work of restoration," he commented. "It aided when there was no state appropriation during the time of the early searches." He complimented R. Brognard Okie, Philadelphia, the architect; and Dr. Warren P. Laird, former member of the

One Room at Bath Street School Is Ordered Closed

Upon the advice of Dr. William C. LeCompte, school physician, the first grade room in the Bath street public school building was closed today for the balance of the term, after Dr. LeCompte had consulted with Doron Green, president of the school board; and Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of schools.

Four cases of scarlet fever have developed among the students of this one room since May 14th. One other case has been reported from the sixth grade of the same building.

Dr. LeCompte and James H. Brooks, health officer, have been keeping close watch on the condition and when the fourth case from the one room was reported Saturday afternoon to Mr. Brooks, Dr. LeCompte thought it advisable to close the room for the balance of the term.

Since the outbreak of the first case Dr. LeCompte has carefully checked each child. The room has been disinfected a number of times.

HOW TO PREPARE

Senator Vandenberg cuts to the heart of the question of preparing the United States for defense by pointing to the urgent necessity, in carrying out the program, of close and effective co-operation between the Government and industry.

An arrangement for this teamwork, ready to go, is lacking because President Roosevelt, after launching a plan a few months ago, quickly abandoned it.

Last September, shortly after the war started, he created the War Resources Board. The chairman was Edward R. Stettinius, a Morgan & Company member, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. The other exceptionally qualified members were: Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company; Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution; John Lee Pratt, of General Motors; Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of Sears Roebuck and Company.

This board met, reviewed the plans for industrial mobilization in the War Department's files and rendered a preliminary report to the President. The report has not been made public. Essentials of its contents are known to be anathema to ardent New Dealers in the President's inner circle. Radicals in Congress made blasting attacks on the board and its members. In a characteristic quick change, the President dissolved the new body and kept its findings secret.

Return to substantially the discarded program is clearly the answer to the present problem. It is one thing to appropriate for and another thing to get 50,000 airplanes, 100,000 tanks, a greater Navy and Army of 1,000,000 men equipped with all the latest war machines.

Contentions are utterly unsuitable that the country's best brains in finance and industry, if given this function, would use it to reap vast profits for themselves. There is no responsible business man, small or large, who doesn't know that the terrific costs must absorb in taxation virtually all the profits. They all know what is happening to business men in Europe. The greatest among them would be men to know most vividly that the American defenses now sought are needed for their defense.

A writer discloses that Grover Whalen wants to be President, but not this next time, surely. With the way things are now this country needs a chief executive with a machine gun in his belt, instead of one with a carnation in his lapel and whose chief claim to public notice is that he is regularly selected as one of the Ten Best Dressed Men.

A Berlin spokesman discussing "Hitler's plans for post-war Europe," says it "must be borne in mind that one of the guiding principles of the Reich has been a love of order. That last, however, may have been a misprint for "love to order"—order defenseless folk shot and the like.

A doubter has called upon Senator Thomas of Oklahoma for his authority for his assertion that American military planes are inferior to those of the German air force. It is just such untoward incidents as this that give our busy statesmen that careworn, haunted look.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Oct. 3, 1878. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Near Bristol, on the farm of Mr. Joseph Stackhouse, on the 17th of last month, Mr. A. V. Johnson and brother cut and tied 100 shocks of large corn from a quarter past seven o'clock until 12 o'clock, noon.

Work has been commenced upon the improvements to the engine house. The floor has been removed and a cellar is being dug, and when this is finished, operations will be begun upon the new story which is to be added to the building. The workmen engaged in taking up this filler kept a sharp lookout for any valuables which might have been lost under it, but their vigilance was only rewarded by finding one dollar and a half.

The property of Captain Charles Thompson, consisting of a house and lot on Dorrance street, and a house and lot on Radcliffe street and Hollow Creek, was sold to Jesse B. Mears for $3,200 on Saturday last.

Mrs. Hogeland who resides near Bridgewater, was killed by the cars this morning while crossing the bridge at Schenck's station.

The Bristol baseball grounds will next year be fenced in.

MORRISVILLE—Willie Twiggs, the young lad who was severely injured by the explosion of powder in a bottle, is now recovering. It is thought he will regain the use of his eye, although it is yet very weak.

Professors Clemmer and Petermann gave some musical instruction to the pupils of the M. E. Sunday School on Sunday afternoon week. Prof. Clemmer stated that in six years he had given instructions to 28,000 children. The hymns sung were very pretty ones.

The third session of the Institute began under favorable auspices on Tuesday evening, the room being crowded early in the evening. The president, Mr. Charles E. Scheider, called the meeting to order, and after a short address, congratulating the members upon the flourishing condition of the Institute, and the conclusion of the preliminary exercises, the meeting went into consideration of a new constitution and by-laws, which elicited considerable and spirited discussion, so that when it was postponed for further action, and officers were nominated for the ensuing term it was after nine o'clock, leaving little time for the literary program, which was as follows: Instrumental duo, Mrs. William and Miss Sallie M. Hawke; recitation, "Famine" from Longfellow's "Hiawatha," Miss Annie Pray; vocal solo, "Baby Mine," Miss Maggie A. Bache; essay upon Deception, Dr. G. W. Adams; reading, "Mr. Lamb's Bet," Joseph W. Swain; instrumental duo, violin and piano, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Collins. The Institute then adjourned until next Tuesday.

The Great Game of Politics

and is due more to an aroused public sentiment and political expediency than real conviction should not prevent it from being commended. However, it would be more effective if the reasons for withdrawal were stated with greater force. It is conceivable, of course, that this might be embarrassing because of the identification of the Administration with the Guild. From the start it has been a practically one hundred per cent. New Deal outfit under Communist control.

THOSE who know the facts say the Guild really was organized to express New Deal resentment against the American Bar Association. The Association was in great disfavor with the President because of the critical attitude of its leading members toward the NRA, the AAA, and other New Deal gadgets. The idea was to form an organization which would be a protest against the reaction of the Bar Association and represent the "liberals." Nearly all the New Deal lawyers joined up. So did a good many other lawyers who wanted to stand in with the New Dealers. Cabinet members such as Mr. Ickes frequently used it as a vehicle to denounce business and for a while the Administration was greatly pleased. But the Communists got control almost from the start and it has been found impossible to shake their grip. Now the Administrationists are pulling out, some of them from personal disgust, others because it seems unsafe to stay in.

THESE are pretty serious times. the country is trying to arm and the Communist party here is against defense appropriations. It is linked with the Russian Soviet which is linked with Hitler. There is not the same tolerance for Communism among the people now there has been the past few years, and it is time the White House woke up to it. A few weeks ago the American Youth Congress, special pet of Mrs. Roosevelt, whose leaders she has entertained at the White House, booed the President's defense plan at a meeting which she attended and addressed.

MRS. Roosevelt, of course, is not a Communist, but some of the organizations she has selected for special favor are saturated with Communism. Actually, she is a member of one group which, Mr. Westbrooke Pegler repeatedly has charged is completely under Communist control. Mr. Roosevelt isn't a Communist either, but he has time and again had leaders of the Communistic Workers' Alliance at the White House, and some of his closest aides have posed as their defenders and friends. It is certainly time the Administration shook itself free from all contact with Communistic influence. The withdrawals from the Lawyers' Guild are good so far as they go. There ought to be more withdrawals from that and other guilds.

FROM the beginning the Communists have been strong supporters of the President and the New Deal. Particularly they have supported the great spending policy upon which the whole New Deal is based. But Communist support of the New Deal is because of the justified belief that it tended toward the Communist goal, which is chaos. Talk about Trojan horses! In the past seven years the Communists of America have played the Trojan-horse game with this country more effectively than ever it was played before. As the Dies committee proved, they have been boring steadily from within. And they were able to do this because they called themselves "liberals" and thus appealed to the radical group among the New Dealers.

THAT was disturbing enough when the only threat to the country was national insolvency. But now, with a great war, in which we may become involved, blazing abroad, it is intolerable. It is all very well to talk about steps to nullify fifth-column activities, but that does not make sense until the Administration cuts every Communist tie and roots out every Communist jobholder. It particularly does not make sense if people prominently connected with the Administration are going to attend meetings and hold memberships in organizations even suspected of being Communistic.

TITAN TOWER" by JAMES G. CHESNUTT

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

At exactly the same time in two homes—far apart in site and station—two dramatic scenes were being enacted. And both of them centered about a common focal figure, young Mickey Morton.

In Mrs. Blauer's humble cottage at the shore, Linda Morton and Steve Hubbard tensely awaited the verdict of laboratory science; waited for the report of the nurse who had called to take the blood count of the stricken boy.

In the stately Lake Forest mansion of the Bradley Mortons of Chicago, 2,000 miles away, Mike Morton's parents were learning for the first time that they had a grandson.

Since Linda's arrival at Lake Tahoe for her vacation visit with the Blaines, the photograph snapped with Dr. Blaine by the resort photographer had lain unused in newspaper "morgues" throughout the country, to which it had been sent by the resort publicity man.

But when Linda made the dramatic dash by airplane to reach the sick boy, the picture was no longer publicity. It became news with the story. To Chicago editors, the magic Morton name was Page One copy.

That is how it happened that Bradley Morton, at breakfast, coughed into his coffee and upset his grapefruit from its nest of shaven ice—an epochal upheaval of the Morton aplomb which nothing short of a bank failure or a new surplus tax could accomplish.

Mrs. Bradley Morton, so distant that she seemed to be at the other baseline of a white linen tennis court, ready for service, lifted her head in an attitude that implied a lorgnette.

"Don't be absurd, Brad," she said. "How could he? And stop sputtering so!"

"Why shouldn't I sputter?" the captain of finance snapped back. "We have a grandson, I tell you!"

"Nonsense!" Mrs. Morton retorted. "We know they were childless when Michael . . . when our boy was taken from us. Maybe that grasping girl married again . . . or . . ."

"Yes," exulted Bradley Morton, "OR. That's just it. It says here that the child was born posthumously after Michael's death. Look!"

Despite his years and dignity, Bradley Morton, banker, made it to his wife's side quicker than he could foreclose a note.

"Look!" he repeated.

Mrs. Bradley Morton looked.

There it was, indisputably, on the front page. It was a story, running down the column beside the picture of Linda taken at Tahoe, and it read:

MIKE MORTON WIDOW IN PLANE DASH TO AID SON

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—Airplane flight, which robbed her of her husband nearly three years ago, today proved a friend in need for Mrs. Linda Walsh Morton, 24, attractive widow of Mike Morton, late Chicago playboy-pilot.

In a dramatic dash by private plane from Lake Tahoe, where she had been visiting with the family of John R. Blaine, San Francisco capitalist, Mrs. Morton, former airline stewardess, sped to the bedside of her son, Bradley Michael Morton II, at Capitola, seventy-five miles south of here.

The boy, 2½ years old, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis while on vacation at the seaside resort with his nurse.

Morton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Morton of Chicago, was killed, etc., etc.

Mrs. Bradley Morton carefully folded the paper and placed it beside her plate.

"Imogene," her husband said, and he seemed for the first time really human. "Did you see the boy's name? Michael wanted him named for me . . . even after what we . . ."

"Yes, Brad," she answered, and her eyes were moist. "Bradley, we must find out about that child—right away!"

* * *

At the shore, 2,000 miles away, Linda and Steve had found out about Mickey. And their happiness, their relief, knew no bounds.

The report from the laboratory showed that Mickey's blood count was 8,000, normal for a child of his age. And Mickey was vastly improved, sitting up in bed and smiling. The pain was gone and the appendicitis diagnosis appeared definitely to have been an error.

"Praise the Lord!" Mrs. Blauer had exclaimed reverently. "If anything had happened to my baby it would have been on my head. Though I'm sure I took care of him and didn't let him eat anything I don't feed him at home . . ."

"Mickey," Linda pleaded, sprawling across the bed and caressing his blond hair with both hands. "Tell mother, darling, did Mickey eat something and didn't tell Aunty Blauer . . .?"

"Uh-uh," reflectively. "Not but the apples."

"Apples?" Linda sat upright.

"Little ones. In the kitchen."

"Good merciful heavens!" It was Mrs. Blauer. "The crab apples. I made jelly day before yesterday. I forgot about the crabs . . .!"

"No, not crabs," Mickey corrected solemnly. "Apples. Sour ones."

And then—not so much at Mickey as from relieved tension — Linda snapped like a spring, lay back on the bed and laughed till the tears came. Steve added his deep chuckle and Mrs. Blauer joined in. Mickey, proud, thought he had made a great joke.

"Steve," said Linda, when she had recovered her breath, "I've been too worried to ask you—but I've wondered. How did you happen to be here when you were needed most?"

"Oh, you know Hubbard," Steve gestured, "always hanging around. Always has his hands full of someone else's business. You just can't drive the guy away."

"Seriously, I mean."

"Well, you see it was this way, lady. I tried to impress you once with the fact that we—Casa Linda and I—won a national competition. I'll be going back East to collect the prize pretty soon and I wanted . . . well, I wanted to be with my best friends for a while before I go. So I up and knocked off work for a little vacation, and here I am. And here you are, too, and we're all happy—huh?"

"Yes," said Linda. "VERY happy, Steve . . . And thank you. Lots."

Funny, Steve told himself, she'd never smiled at him that way before. A guy might still have a chance. Well, he might . . .

After they had returned to San Francisco, Linda didn't see Bill Blaine right away. After all, he hadn't volunteered to accompany her on the plane dash to Mickey's side. Perhaps he was too stunned by the revelation of her son's existence; perhaps he felt he might be in the way. He telephoned daily, but it was several days before Linda could conveniently find time to see him.

And, in that interim, something happened to provide the final blow to her nearly shattered nerves. And this time it happened to Steve. To Steve, whose hands were always full of somebody else's business, bless him for that!

And it had to be Merry Blaine, of all people, who was responsible. Anyone but Merry, as careless as she was carefree, would have seen Steve crouched over his rear license plate, fastening the bolts. Anyone but Merry would have been careful about putting her own car into reverse, instead of mistakenly into second gear, and would have started slowly instead of with a heavy tromp on the accelerator, crashing into the car ahead.

Steve's body was turned sideways and missed the full force of the impact. But his two hands had been caught between the headlight and fender of Merry's car and the rear license frame on which he was working.

His right hand was smashed and lacerated.

It was Merry, crying and somewhat sick, who had Steve taken to her brother's office from the basement garage. And it was Merry who summoned Linda.

When Linda first saw Steve's face, she knew he was badly hurt. When she saw his hands, particularly the right hand, she knew that unless this was saved, the real Steve—the hidden Steve she had grown to know—would die.

Linda, looking with shock-widened eyes at Steve's mangled right hand—the hand on which his whole career, his very life, depended—tottered on an emotional fence.

One little list would have thrown her into an advanced attack of the weeps—in which circumstance she would have been less than useless, to Steve or anyone else. A little more exercise of will, if she could muster it, and she'd be the sure, cool Linda—the nurse whose nerveless efficiency helped save the life of the man on the roof. Ages ago, that seemed now.

The will won out. Linda was all right now. She was all right until she looked from his hands back to Steve's face and saw the hurt reflected there.

Richard Capriotti, and in English by Mary DiRenzo. The Rev. Peter A. Pinci, rector of St. Ann's R. C. Church, was the orator of the occasion.

The entertainment program also included the following numbers: "Star Spangled Banner," "Inno Al Papa," school choir; La Bambola, 1st and 2nd grade girls; Soldatini Italiani, 1st, 2nd and 3rd grade boys; "Japanese Parasol," 3rd and 4th grade girls; "In the Garden," 5th and 6th grade girls; "God Bless America," and "Woman Is Fickle," school choir; Inno A Roma, and "A Merry Life," choir; "La Bizoga," Anna DiYanni; "Wrap Me in the Dear Old Flag, Boys," grammar grades; "America, the Beautiful," choir; graduation song, "Salve Regina."

In the play, "The Maid of Orleans," Joan of Arc was seen in the first act, apart from her friends, she thinking of more serious things while her chums enjoyed the fete. In act two, Joan, who had for three years been visited repeatedly by some of the saints who told her she was destined by God to save France from the enemy, left her home and all who were dear to her. The third act showed her arrival at the king's palace, where she explained her visions. The King gave her an army which she led to victory. The King was then crowned at Rheims. In the fourth act Joan asked to return to her home as she considered her mission fulfilled. In the final act after another battle was fought, Joan was seen captured by the English. Accused by them of heresy and witchcraft, she was condemned to be burned at the stake, following many unjust trials.

Evening Wedding at South Langhorne is Pretty Affair

SOUTH LANGHORNE, June 10—The marriage of Miss Marion Doris Oakley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D. Oakley, "Oaklihurst," to Mr. Girard Hayden Rodgers, son of Mr. Arthur Rodgers, Washington, D. C., was an event of Saturday evening.

The Oaklihurst Chapel was the scene of the eight o'clock ceremony, flowers, palms and other greens being used as decorations for the edifice. The Rev. Ralph Carr, Plainfield, N. J., was the officiating clergyman.

Presiding at the piano was Mrs. Albert Rowe, Holland. The vocalist was Mrs. Raymond Anderson, Newtown, who, in addition to "At Dawning" and "Because," sang "You'll Always Be Sweetheart To Me," the words and music of this selection being composed by the bride. Mrs. Anderson was accompanied by Mrs. Rowe at the piano, and Mrs. Albert Haimback, Langhorne, violinist. Selections by the pianist and violinist for the ceremony included "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life," "I Love You Truly," and "Oh Promise Me."

The bride was attractively gowned in white silk lace net over satin. Her white tulle veil was fastened with a wreath and clusters of pearls and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was composed of white snapdragons, white carnations, and baby breath.

Attendants of the former Miss Oakley were the Misses Doris Oakley and Irene Clough, and Mrs. Carl Claassen, South Langhorne; Miss Ruth Oakley, Bethlehem; Miss Edna Blinn, Trenton, N. JJ.; Miss Gladys Farmer, Philadelphia, as bridesmaids; Miss Ruth Sink, Philadelphia, as maid of honor; and Phyllis VanVossen, Bristol, and Helen Claassen, as flower girls.

Attending his brother as best man was Calvin Rodgers, Washington, D. C.; the ushers including Carl Claassen, Edwin Campbell, Walter MacMath, South Langhorne; Alfred Zook, Philadelphia; and Earl Goodwin, Trenton, N. J.

For the ceremony the maid of honor, Miss Sink, was garbed in orchid tone, and carried gold and orchid toned snapdragons. The bridesmaids were attired similarly and each carried snapdragons. Miss Doris Oakley and Mrs. Claassen wore aquamarine, and carried pink snapdragons; Miss Farmer and Miss Ruth Oakley, peach, and carrying golden bronze flowers; Miss Clough wore light blue, and carried a pink bouquet; Miss Blinn chose a dress of pink tone, and carried pink snapdragons. The one flower girl, Miss Helen Claassen, wore a dress of pink, and Miss VanVossen, blue.

At the reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Claassen, 75 guests were received. For the honeymoon trip to Atlantic City, the bride was attired in a suit of crimson and white, with white accessories. Mr. Rodgers and his wife will reside in Washington, D. C.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

Concerning spiritual gifts, let us not be ignorant. When we use our talents to exploit others or to prevent them from realizing their own powers; when we use our best talents to create a place in society for ourselves and ourselves only, we remain ignorant of spiritual gifts. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Gregory LaCava hits a third cinematic home run in this appealing story of a friendless outcast and her stormy romance with a wise-cracking and impetuous young man who runs a lunch counter down by the fish canneries.

The girl, ashamed of her disreputable family, encounters the boy and falls in love with him—chiefly because he is the first man who has ever been kind to her, and the first ever to kiss her.

RITZ THEATRE

Deviating from the customary doctor-nurse picture, RKO Radio's "Vigil in the Night" accurately presents the inside story of a nurse's duties as well as the drama of the protagonist's romantic ordeals.

Starring Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley, the story is told from a nurse's standpoint, with two hospitals in England supplying the backgrounds. With A. J. Cronin, a noted doctor-author writing the original story, the authenticity of the dramatic situation is unquestionable.

BRISTOL THEATRE

PENN A. C. BUNCHES HITS IN 3 INNINGS TO DEFEAT LANDRETH

BATTED IN FOUR RUNS

Flashy Player Also Accepted Nine Chances At Shortstop

Penn A. C. bunched eight of their eleven hits in three innings to score all their runs and defeat Landreth Seeds yesterday afternoon at Landreth Ball Park, 6-3.

Howard Black was Manager Landreth's starting pitcher and might have fared alright had not a gentleman answering to the name of Yeager appeared in the Collegians line-up, as it was Yeager faced Black four times, made four hits, batted in four runs, and played a real flashy game at short stop accepting nine chances. Yeager is a product of William and Mary College and last season was under contract to the Boston American League Team, a bean ball fractured his skull and he was out of action all season.

Liberatore's base on balls and Johnnie Miksis' hit and steal, Lodge's out to deep center field and David's line smash to left field gave Landreth's two runs in the first inning.

Pennac's tied the score in their half of the second on Yeager's two base hit, Simon's single and Fortune's two base hit. "Bill" Griggs put the Farmers to the fore again in their half of the inning, after Broderick had singled and got caught off first. Bill hit a homer—his first of the season—to right center field to score the Seeds' final run.

Black showed signs of weakening in the eighth inning. Hits by Yeager and Fortune and a base on balls loaded the bases with two out, Carey replaced him and fanned Curley Ogden to end the inning.

Eddie Liberatore played well for the home team at second base, his brilliant fielding getting several hard drives labeled as base hits. David and Harrison made fine catches of line drives which saved several runs.

Wednesday evening the 19th Ward Republican Club will play the Landreth team at Landreth Ball Park at 6.15.

BRISTOL A. A. DEFEATS ATLANTIC CITY NINE

ATLANTIC CITY, June 10—Two run spurts in the seventh and ninth innings gave the Bristol A. A. team a well-earned triumph over the Atlantic City Collegians yesterday afternoon at the Chelsea Ball Park.

Until the seventh, Big Bill Mullins had held the Bristol boys to six hits and was sailing to a 5-3 victory. But a triple by Hunter, a walk to Felkner, and a single by Hughes deadlocked the count in the seventh.

After a scoreless eighth, Bristol won the game in the ninth when Hughes drew a pass and went to third on Stallone's hit. Stallone went to second unmolested and both counted on a long hit by Palowez.

A brilliant stop of a hard hit ball by Stallone in the ninth presented the Jerseyites from producing a rally. His throw to first which was covered by Dick, retired the runner by a step.

Cahill with three hits led the Bristol batters. Stan Dick held the Atlantic City team to eight hits. Carrigolo made three hits off Dick while F. Sheppard played best in the field.

Mulholland's boys will play their second home game of the season Wednesday night, meeting the revised Burlington Spartons.

LEGION JUNIORS WIN OVER VOLTZ STARS, 3-2

The Robert W. Bracken Post 382, American Legion Junior team, defeated the Voltz Stars who were strengthened with Harry Bauroth, the Colgate Star playing shortstop. The score was 3 to 2. Bauroth had 3 hits and he is a former Legion Junior player of the Bristol team.

The Legion Juniors won the game in the eighth inning when with Barbetta on third base, Palumbo bunted safely scoring Barbetta with what proved to be the winning run. The Legion Juniors pitchers were very strong against their much older opponents. The fielding of both team was very good. Fans, come out and see the American way to train boys.

MARCELLINI BOOKED TO FIGHT FIRPO AT ARENA TONIGHT

Two Leading Flyweights of East Will Tangle Mitts In Wind-Up

DELIA TO MEET RAGONE

Lenny Dever Scheduled To Make His 1940 Bristol Debut

Aiming to please the fight fans of this section, Match-maker Jimmy Reilly and Promotor Cliff Smith will present another six-bout boxing card tonight in the St. Ann's A. A. arena, Wood and Franklin streets.

That promotors of the Bristol fights are sincere in their efforts to bring the best to the borough of Bristol has been evidenced by their opening fight and wrestling cards. Three figures, rated high in the sporting world, were in Bristol last week: Tony Galento, Harry Belough, and the Swedish Angel.

Now they have begun to get the most interesting fighters who can supply the fans with action. The first will begin tonight when Johnny Marcellini and Pedro Firpo, two of the east's leading flyweights will tangle mitts in the wind-up of the card.

Marcellini is known from coast to coast for his fighting ability and at one time represented the United States on a boxing tour throughout the leading cities in Europe.

Firpo replaces Monty Pigantore on the card. Pigantore, in a bout last week, injured his ear. To make certain that Pigantore could not appear, the local promotors took a trip to New York yesterday before allowing him to break his contract. It was here that Firpo who comes from Puerto Rico and is touring the United States was matched. Firpo has boxed such fighters as Sixto Estobar, Nick Camarata, Billy Rodox, Cordell, and many others in the flyweight class.

All fans of this section know the fighting prowess of that southpaw Vince Delia, Trenton, who for several years fought under the colors of the St. Ann's A. A. in the amateur bouts. Vince is now flinging the leather in the pro ranks. He did not have a chance to show his wares last season but now is ready for his Bristol debut.

Delia's foe for tonight's bout will be a rough and tough little youngster from the Bronx, Al Ragone. Matchmaker Reilly and his aid Al Cohen who have seen both of these boys in action predict an early knockout. When asked which one will be knocked out, Cohen replied: "The one who gets in the first solid punch."

After his showing against Jack Spina last week, the promotors just could not keep Hokey Leighton off the card. He is booked to fight Jack Topex, Philadelphia, in a six-rounder. When the local promotors of fights matched Leighton against Jack Spina, they drew the ire of many localites who believed that Spina was too much for the Croydonites. But Hokey took care of the situation in his own way, by kayoing his foe in the final round.

Lenny Dever who confines most of his fighting to New York State, will make his 1940 Bristol debut in one of the four-round preliminary bouts. His opponent will be announced from the ring.

Reserve seats for the show may be secured at St. Ann's club-house. The 1700 general admission tickets go on sale at 7 o'clock.

Two sedans were slightly damaged, the one said to have crashed into the rear of the first, which had halted at a traffic light at South Langhorne. The first machine was driven by Abraham Belson, Brooklyn, N. Y.; the one crashing into the halted car being driven by George M. Jewesson, Scarsdale, N. Y. Treated by a South Langhorne physician were Emily Jewesson, who suffered from shock and bruises; and Fanny Belson, who has contusions of the chest, and injuries to her arm.

On Saturday evening two sedans crashed at Makefield and Swamp Road, Lower Makefield Township. The drivers were Joseph Gibson, Pond street, Bristol, whom officers claim failed to stop at a "stop" sign; and William F. Jackson, Morrisville. Gibson was fined $10 and costs. The two cars were considerably damaged, but no one injured according to the police report.

Lawrence Kuhn, Lansdale, was arrested on a charge of drunken driving, when his coupe and a sedan operated by Marvin Elwood Hauck, Yardville, N. J., were involved in an accident on River Road, near Washington Crossing, late Saturday evening. Kuhn claimed that lights of the approaching car blinded him. He is being held at Doylestown. The cars were considerably damaged by the impact.

Pennsylvania State Art Commission upon their untiring efforts in behalf of "Pennsbury." The construction work, the dedication ceremony, and other phases of the restoration period were reviewed by Mr. Busch. He mentioned to the gathering that a pamphlet, "Records and Activities," will this year replace the year book of the society. This new edition is now being printed, ready for distribution in September, the same containing complete records of events and activities of the Welcome Society.

The society president spoke of the activities of State Senator Howard I. James, whose work splendidly supplemented that of his predecessor, Clarence J. Buckman, on behalf of "Pennsbury"; also that of Major Frank W. Melvin, former chairman of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission; Mrs. J. Bertram Lippincott, and of Joseph R. Grundy's activities and interest in the Welcome Society. Dr. Melvin was introduced to the assemblage, and informed of a rare autographed note of Penn which he found for sale. This note also contains the autograph of James Logan, the same being written at "Pennsbury." To the members he offered the suggestion that this might be an excellent gift to present for safe-keeping at the restored manor house.

This "dream" of restoring "Pennsbury," has been that of several generations, stated Dr. Melvin, who recalled legislation to such effect being introduced as early as the 1880s, but with nothing coming of the venture. Then in 1935-36 the State Authority legislation became a reality, with actual work on the property following. "There is no discrepancy in location," he informed. "The work is 85 to 90 per cent accurate. Everything about the buildings has a reason and an explanation. . . . And Mr. Okie, the architect, is planning to write a justification for every room and building, to give historical authenticity to the works, showing how the details of color, materials, etc., were carried out. This result comes from careful, precise study over a period of years."

Continuing, Dr. Melvin said: "In these days when the foundations of Democracy are being shaken, it is a good thing to have such as 'Pennsbury' to show to the children and the people of Pennsylvania and the nation. May the spirit of the Founder breathe again within these walls." He told that the country estate had had three names at different times: William Penn's Farm, William Penn's Memorial, and then "Pennsbury Manor." He added: "The name 'Pennsbury Manor' is the only one in dignity and keeping with the Proprietor."

The chairman of the meeting, Mr. Busch, in considering the outlook toward the Delaware River, expressed the hope for aid from residents of the state of New Jersey, the desire being mentioned that the State of New Jersey might acquire Newbold Island and thus add to attractiveness of the surroundings. "It may be a long hope, but let us not give up hope." Mr. Busch, in speaking of the hope for trees on the site, told of the work of Charles Henry Moon, Fallsington, in planting a nursery there.

Those of prominence attending Saturday's event, included: Major Frank W. Melvin, former chairman of Pennsylvania Historical Commission; Prof. Roy F. Nichols and Edward Barnsley, members of the Pennsylvania Historical Commission; Charles Francis Jenkins; former United States Senator, Joseph R. Grundy; former state senator Clarence J.
